Significantly, to avoid offence to Muslims, negative references to Islam, and references to the religious nature of the tyrant (calling him an Antichrist and a "strong master of Mohammedan law") and his war were eliminated, as well as the portrayal of the then-current Gulf conflict as a religious war. The 1980s could be the time for Ted Kennedy to run to the U.S. presidency, after the Chappaquiddick incident (1969). Spokesmen for Warner Bros Home Video confirm that "The Man Who Foretold the Future" has emerged as a surprise hit from their backlist."^[3] The San Bernardino Sun ran a piece that quoted, ""We have a couple of copies, and it's always gone. Much of Heston's narration constituted a verbatim reprise of Welles' original presentation. The assassination of Robert F. While many skilled linguists have worked on the problem of translating the works of Nostradamus, all have struggled with the format the author used. Nostradamus claims that the "King of Terror" would form an alliance with Russia. "Customers bringing it back say it's a pretty interesting movie. A "King of Terror", wearing a blue turban, described as "the terror of mankind", would rise to power from Greater Arabia during the late 1990s, wage war around the world and spread the influence of Islamic fundamentalism, along with the decreasing influence of Christianity. Not content with such obfuscation, Nostradamus is also said to have used anagrams to further confuse potential inquirers (particularly with respect to names and places). As Ted Kennedy had failed in his 1980 Presidential bid and did not run for the Presidency in 1984, or any time thereafter, references to his possible Presidency were eliminated. That said, every prediction Nostradamus made is open to numerous and varied interpretations. The filmmakers want to find out whether the French astrologer and physician XVI century Nostradamus predicted events such as the overthrow of king Louis XVI, the rise of Napoleon, the murder of US President John Kennedy.Screenshots: Download:The Man Who Saw Tomorrow (1981) Want more? Welles' view Welles, though he agreed to host the film, was not a believer in the subject matter presented. The last quarter of the film discusses Nostradamus' supposed prediction for the then future of the 1980s, 1990s and beyond. Welles' main objection to the generally accepted translations of Nostradamus' quatrains (so called because Nostradamus organized all his works into a series of four lined prose, which were then collected into "centuries", or groups of 100 such works) relates in part to the translation efforts. As is so often the case, Nostradamus' obscure quatrains are easily manipulated to suit the needs of the manipulators."^[6] References ^ a b Jicha, Tom (1991-02-20). There are no scientifically testable predictions directly included in this film, only suggestions and allusions. Although David L. The French Revolution (1789-1799). There were, however, some significant differences between the 1991 remake and the original film: Much of the religious content was omitted. "Sales clerks at the busy 20/20 Video Store on La Cienega Boulevard told me the tape is renting like crazy, and the overnight fee has been raised to $6, reflecting the demand. I've had a couple of people go so far as to say they're planning on it (the earthquake). The film depicts many of Nostradamus' predictions as evidence of Nostradamus' predicting ability, though as with other works, nothing is offered which conclusively proves his accuracy. San Bernardino Sun. Moreover, the predictions relating to the third tyrant were adapted to serve U.S. propaganda purposes during the then-occurring Gulf War. It is not known if Welles was contractually obligated to narrate the film, or if he simply grew disenchanted with its subject matter and presentation after completing it. Retrieved 2017-09-15. New York: Garland Publishing. The remake was shortened to one hour, leading to the omission of all references to the Robert F. ^ a b Variety and Daily Variety Television Reviews: Volume 17. There have understandably been those people who, acting in their own devious interests, have manufactured events specifically to resemble predictions, knowing that men who believe events will unfold a certain way, will work to ensure they do, even to their own detriment. The "King of Terror" would eventually be defeated himself, after the two farthest northern neighbors US (Eagle) and Russia (Bear) form an alliance and destroy the "King of Terror". The end of the rivalry between the Soviet Union and the United States ("One day, the two great masters would be friends...The eastern ruler would be vanquished" but which could just as easily have referred to the Holy Roman Empire and the Ottoman Empire). The Man Who Saw Tomorrow is narrated (one might say "hosted") by Orson Welles. ISBN 9780824037963. ^ "Quake prophecy rattles region". Perhaps Welles' most public criticism of the subject matter of the film occurred during a guest appearance on an early 1980s episode of The Merv Griffin Show: "One might as well make predictions based on random passages from the phone book", he offered when asked about the film, before moving on to discuss other projects more interesting to him personally. As we move toward whatever future may be for us, there will always be those who will see something in a quattrain that strikes them as similar enough to think, "AHA! He got it right!". ^ Ebert, Roger (March 6, 1988). Similarly, the severity of the third tyrant's war was diminished, omitting references to the conquest of Europe, nuclear war, and the destruction of New York City, as well as the prediction that the war would begin in 1994. While Saddam Hussein stands a fair chance of wreaking the kind of global havoc supposedly forecast according to the earlier film, this special ignores some of the more apocalyptic scenarios of that '81 pic to focus unconvincingly on events to date. Discussion of the remaining predictions was abridged. 1991 remake On February 20, 1991, during the Gulf War, NBC aired a remake of this film, hosted and narrated by Charlton Heston,^[1] Much of the same footage, voice acting, and musical score was retained from the original movie. "For Show About Seer, The Outlook Is ... Welles himself completely rejected the central theme of the film after having made it. A conspiracy to assassinate U.S. President John F. According to Nostradamus, the "King of Terror" and Russia would wage World War III against the West (United States, United Kingdom and France), starting with a nuclear strike on New York City ("the sky will burn at 45 degrees, fire approaches the great new city"). When you watch this movie, keep in mind that several of the more popular quatrains have been applied to multiple events at various times through history, always with the "AHA!" moment in the minds of the interpreters. Kennedy assassination, Francisco Franco, the Edward VIII abdication crisis, Jeanne Dixon, and to allegations surrounding the disinterment of Nostradamus in 1791. It's a non-stop rental," said Keith Cramer, assistant manager at the Warehouse on Highland Avenue in San Bernardino. The last part of the film describes quite vague predictions of Nostradamus, related to modern civilization (XVIII - XX centuries).The film features a variety of documentary footage, chronicle of events, interviews of many experts. In the film are some possibilities evidence predictive power of Nostradamus, although, as before, completely unable to confirm its ability in anticipation of future. A major earthquake striking Los Angeles in May 1988. The nature of the overall changes served the purpose of brevity, reducing an eighty-eight-minute film to a one-hour television broadcast, including commercial interruptions. The third tyrant's war, and the tragedies preceding that war, were made to seem less severe than in Welles' original documentary. Kennedy (1963). Nostradamus lived and wrote during a period of political and religious censorship. Eventually, Kennedy ran for the Presidency in 1980, when he tried to defeat incumbent President Jimmy Carter in the Democratic Party primaries. the answer is a most definite "no."^[1] Reception Roger Ebert noted in March 1988 that Californians were renting the film based on its prediction of an earthquake in May, 2 months later. Sun-Sentinel. 1994. "The Man Who Foretold the Future". The Holocaust. Vol. 115, no. 85. Because of this it is said he disguised his writings not only with somewhat cryptic language, but in four different languages (Latin, French, Italian and Greek). References to the end of the world were eliminated. The atomic bombings of Hiroshima and Nagasaki (1945); Nostradamus claims that World War III would last about 27 years, and the war would destroy cities and kill millions. One person even joked they were planning their vacation so they'd be in Arizona then."^[4] In April 1988, the Los Angeles Journal, referring to earthquake predictions, quoted David Wolper as joking "if the quake does happen, we'll sell a lot more copies, maybe enough to rebuild my house."^[5] Regarding the 1991 edit, Variety TV wrote "[T]he special makes a halfhearted effort to cram current events in the Persian Gulf into Nostradamus' prediction of a third great tyrant (after Napoleon and Hitler). Saddam Hussein was implied to be the third tyrant.[2] The remake discussed the 1989 Loma Prieta earthquake, alleging that this earthquake may have been the one predicted in Welles' movie.[2] Discussion of Nostradamus' alleged predictions was rearranged, in that the remake included discussion of Napoleon with the other two tyrants, rather than with the French Revolution. Clarke, Ray LaskaLanguage: EnglishCountry: USAAlso known as: Nostradamus 1999, L'uomo che vide il futuroDescription of Man Who Saw Tomorrow movie:This film covers many of the predictions of man called Nostradamus in the form in which they were interpreted by scientists, translating his work. Keep in mind, Nostradamus' own disclaimer: "the One who is reasonable can learn from my prophecies how to find the right path to take as if he would have found footprints in the sand from someone who has gone before." The future IS ours to choose. "Variety Television Reviews". The severity of the natural disasters preceding the tyrant's emergence was reduced, as a worldwide famine leading to cannibalism, and earthquakes and flooding in various European cities, had clearly not taken place. Wolper was the executive producer of The Man Who Saw Tomorrow and arranged for the film to be re-edited into the 1991 television special, he was quoted as saying before the broadcast, "If you're asking me if I believe any of this ... The three Antichrists became three "great despotic tyrants", and the religious dimensions of the third tyrant's war were eliminated.
